Innovating Sustainable Agriculture in Mozambique – Learning and Teaching Tools | ISAM

Low productivity in agriculture and a need for establishing higher education in agriculture is the motivation for this project. At the end of the project the following products and trainings will be accomplished:

- Training tools for newly graduated teachers, researchers, advisors and students at PhD level for modern teaching, learning, extension (smallholders and agro-livestock companies) and scientific methods.
- Mentioned groups trained in modern teaching, learning, extension and scientific methods.
- Mentioned groups trained in selected thematic fields of the curriculum.
- An MA curriculum in the field of conservation / organic agriculture that can serve as prototype for developing further curricula at the university.
- Students enrolled in MA programme finished already first semesters.
- Farmers trained by staff of the university.
- Increased productivity in the smallholder farms.

With these activities, the project will contribute to the government's efforts in the development of rural areas and in improving the environment, living conditions, coping strategies for climate change and to contribute to food security and employment in rural areas. In the meantime the project aims at integrating the SDGs.

The project is funded by APPEAR, a programme of the Austrian Development Cooperation.
